un common history

The soaring marble of The Historic Alfred I. Dupont Building has been more than just a witness to history...it's an integral thread in the fabric of Miami's legacy. Since its completion in 1939, the Art Deco skyscraper has seen the end of the Great Depression, served as headquarters to the 7th Naval Fleet in World War II and been designated a national historic landmark. Restored to its original glory both inside and out, this monument to "Streamline Moderne" architecture now hosts exclusive clientele who continue to create their own history-making events in what has become one of the country's most sought-after venues.

un common venue

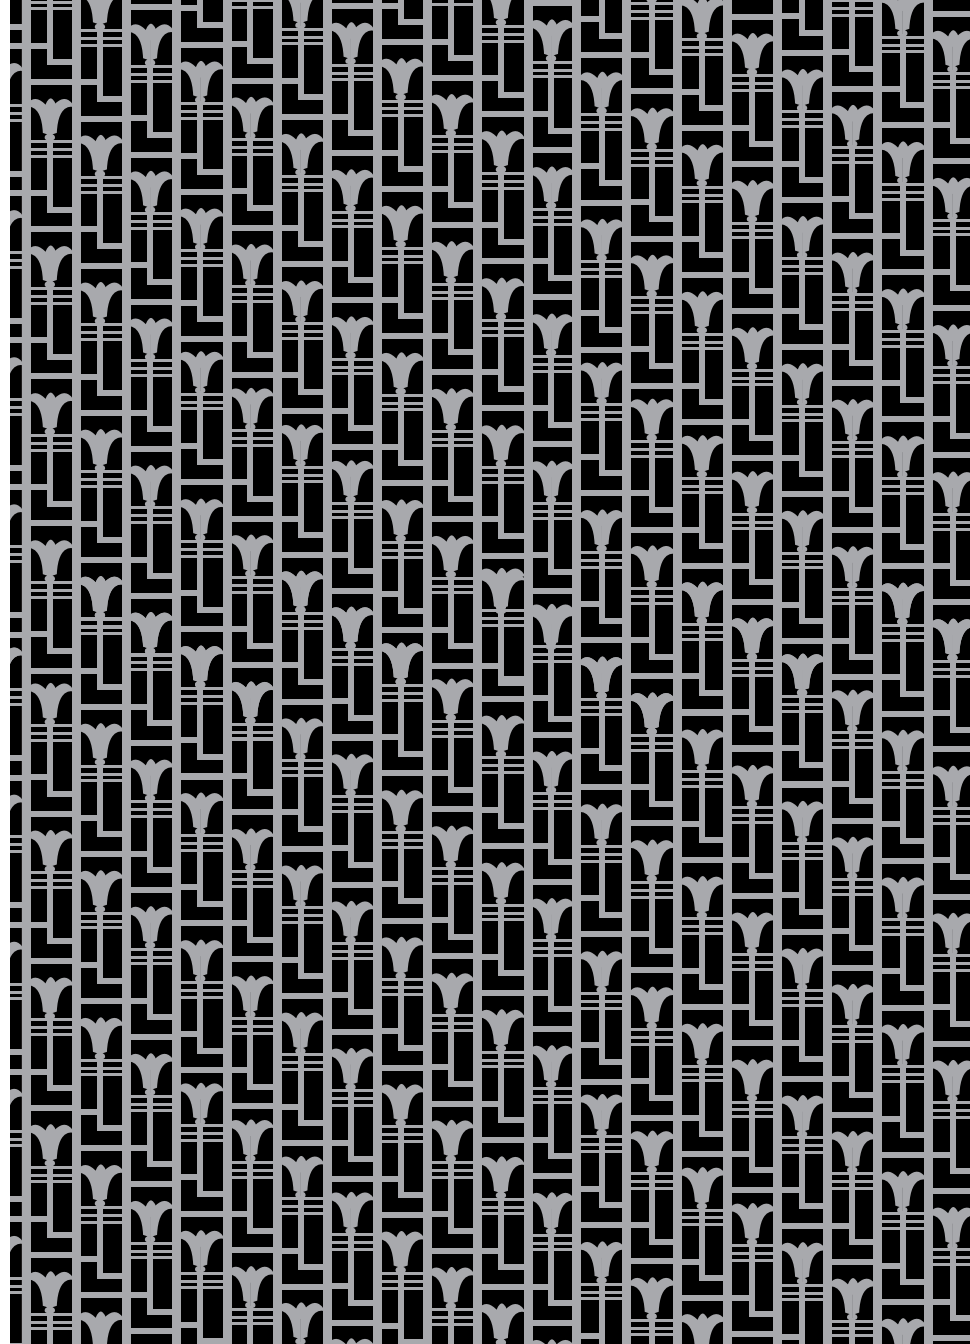

Order a martini from a bartender behind a 1930s hand-wrought bank teller window. Sip it in the confines of the original bank vault. Dance your way through two distinct ballrooms and 22,000 glorious square feet of event space lined with Tennessee marble. Toast under 30-foot beamed and hand-painted ceilings at tables draped and embellished exactly according to your unique desires. For Miami's best, The Historic Alfred I. Dupont Building special event venue provides a dramatic, history-steeped backdrop without peer.

un common events

Whether small and exclusive, or grand and inclusive, events at The Historic Alfred I. Dupont Building embody New York sophistication and Miami opulence. The exceptionally flexible space can be outfitted for a cocktail reception or formal affair just as easily as a fashion show with a 60-foot runway. The unlimited hours and volume invite even the most imaginative celebrations, theatrical performances or film screenings. And as you greet, preside, sip, smile and celebrate, you'll know your uncommonly unique event will be remembered long after the last limousine leaves.
